Clients come to us seeking help for a wide variety of reasons. One aspect of our work as Advanced Myofascial Techniques practitioners is that we learn to look beyond the symptoms, honoring that pain is frequently a signal that something somewhere else needs addressing.

When a new client walks through our door, how do we begin? What body reading and awareness tools do we have at our disposal to efficiently begin our session? How can we bring someone unfamiliar with our work on board to our way of thinking? What amongst the vast repertoire of Advanced Myofascial Techniques might be most appropriate in a first visit? With these questions in mind we will explore ways to better introduce new clients to the benefits of our work.
